

PANEL 1: THE DEVELOPING DOCTRINE UNDER THE FREE EXERCISE CLAUSE

STEPHANIE BARCLAY, SPEAKER

Professor Stephanie Barclay's research focuses on the role our different democratic institutions play in protecting minority rights, particularly at the intersection of free speech and religious exercise. Barclay's academic writing has been published or is forthcoming in publications such as the Harvard Law Review, the Washington University Law Review, the Notre Dame Law Review, and the Boston College Law Review. Her recent article, "An Economic Approach to Religious Exemptions," was selected for the 2020 Stanford/Harvard/Yale Junior Faculty Forum. Barclay directs Notre Dame Law School's Religious Liberty Initiative. She is a Nootbaar Fellow at the Nootbaar Institute on Law, Religion, and Ethics at Pepperdine University, and a Faculty Affiliate at the Constitutional Law Center at Stanford Law School. She has previously clerked on the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and on the U.S. Supreme Court.

ANDREW KOPPELMAN, SPEAKER

Andrew Kopelman is John Paul Stevens Professor of Law, Professor (by courtesy) of Political Science, and Philosophy Department Affiliated Faculty at Northwestern University. He received the Walder Award for Research Excellence from Northwestern, the Hart-Dworkin award in legal philosophy from the Association of American Law Schools, and the Edward S. Corwin Prize from the American Political Science Association. His scholarship focuses on issues at the intersection of law and political philosophy. He has written more than 100 scholarly articles and eight books, most recently Burning Down the House: How Libertarian Philosophy Was Corrupted by Delusion and Greed, (St. Martin's Press). His column appears regularly at The Hill. You can find his recent work at andrewkoppelman.com.
